Fetal Development of "Matthew" Tradition teaches us Christ was conceived on the Feast of the Annunciation. We will watch the parallel development of "Matthew" in the womb beginning on March 25 (Feast of the Annunciation) until December 25. This series of bulletin messages has been prepared by the diocesan Pro Life Office.

Development of Matthew (week 25) I'm really beginning to bulk up. I gained 6 ounces this week! I think most of it was muscle, but also some bone mass and some organ development. My taste buds allow me to distinguish bitter, sweet, and sour. My lungs have developed so well, I'm now officially considered viable. Matthew could live outside the womb. Each parent contributed 15,000 genes that determined not only what Matthew looks like, but also how Matthew interprets tastes, Matthew's athletic abilities, allergies, health, and much more. "Yet you drew me forth from the womb, made me safe at my mother's breast." (Psalm 22:10)

The Diocese of Raleigh has released a series of bioethics videos to educate the faithful on the ethical components of often-complicated biological and medical situations. The talks are each approximately an hour in length. The series explains Catholic teaching on the dignity of the human person on topics such as stem cell research, infertility, end of life issues, and abortion. They are designed as a series, but each talk also can stand alone. A guide with a summary and discussion questions is available on the Pro-Life website at <http://www.dioceseofraleigh.org/how/pro-life/education.aspx>. Parishes may also contract with the speakers to do these talks "live" by contacting the Pro-Life office at Marybeth.phillips@raldioc.org or 919-719-8267.

Learning About the Eucharist (Mass)

History of the Penitential Rite There is no much history to the penitential rite in the Mass prior to Vatican II. The inclusion of the penitential rite as a communal gesture is an innovation in the new order of the mass. "But Father, but Father!" you might say, "I remember the old Mass and hearing the priest and servers recite the Confiteor and strike their chest three times!" True there was a Confiteor in the Tridentine Liturgy but this was a private devotional gesture between the priest and the servers done at the foot of the altar which was actually prior to the actual beginning of Mass. Thus the introduction of this element into the Mass itself and as a communal gesture is new. Some have suggested a historical precedent may be found in Protestantism. Communal confession of sins was first introduced into protestant communion services of the 16th century. Others however, see its roots in the Eastern liturgies wherein a penitential act at the beginning of Mass is almost universal and very ancient in origin. The form of this practice varied however and was sometimes linked to the incensing at the beginning of mass. Even as early as the Didache (written ca 90-100 AD) a confession of sins is prescribed before the Sunday celebration of the Eucharist: "On the Lord's day gather together, break bread and give thanks after confessing your transgressions so that your sacrifice may be pure. Let no one who has a quarrel with his neighbor join you until he is reconciled, lest your sacrifice defiled. For this is that which was proclaimed by the Lord, "In every place and time let there be offered to Me a clean Sacrifice'" Elements of the Penitential rite (the Confiteor and the Kyrie) do have a history and their histories will be dealt with separately below.

The History of the Confiteor (I Confess). The history of this part of the Mass is somewhat convoluted. The remote history may be found in the Western Liturgy in the silent worship which the Pope made when he first came to the altar. Later (by the 7th century) this silent prayer became more elaborate with the directive being that the celebrant lie prostrate before the altar. Likewise, the nature of the prayer came to be more specified. The celebrant was directed to pour forth prayers for himself or for the sins of the people. The general term for this was the apologiae and may be called the forerunner of the Confiteor. Thus a penitential theme is introduced. By the 11th century the Confiteor had developed as a specific dialogue between the Celebrant and those immediately around him. Thus he not only acknowledges his sinfulness before God but also before those who serve him and asks their mediation on his behalf. The actual text of the Confiteor was taken from those used in sacramental confession. The oldest Confiteor formulas were simple and brief. For example here is an 11th Century version from Cluny, "I confess to God and before all His saints and you, Father, that I have sinned in thought word and deed through my fault. I ask you to pray for me. They confessed before God and the heavenly Church (i.e. the saints) as well as asking intercession from the Church on earth. In the Gothic period there grew a practice of listing some of the Saints by name. This is evident in the Confiteor used in the Tridentine Mass.

One other difference today from the Tridentine Mass is that there is no longer a separate recitation of the Confiteor for priest and the servers. Now the communal aspect of the act is stressed even while the personal aspect is retained: I confess.

Sometimes in the Extraordinary Form of the Mass there is a second recitation of the Confiteor just prior to communion that may even be sung.
